

Developing Deep Integrity in leaders

A Conversation in the Karoo

1st-3rd September 2016
Prince Albert

Why attend?

Now, more than ever, the human race needs leaders with integrity. We, the practitioners (leaders, lecturers, teachers, coaches, counsellors, facilitators) who work in the field of leadership and human development need to develop our effectiveness in ensuring integrity in how we lead, how we are led and how we develop others who lead. However, there are many definitions of integrity, and we would like to introduce the notion of “deep integrity”.

“Deep integrity” is defined as a process in which individuals actively pursue psychological integration in which unconscious aspects of the self are considered and brought into consciousness. This process enables leaders to develop increased psychological wholeness, thereby ensuring that they lead with an ethical attitude. By doing this work, their psyches become sufficiently intact in order to withstand collective pressure when necessary, whilst remaining morally engaged with and working towards the general well-being of social and environmental ecosystems.

What will we do?

This is a three day conversation that explores the theory and practice of developing deep integrity in leaders. There will be a keynote address on the first day and six opportunities to offer formal contributions from a theoretical or practical perspective. The main process will be a facilitated conversation in which all participants are able to contribute.

How do I register?

The conference will be run on a non-profit basis where we will simply cover the costs of the venue and refreshments. Everyone, including those who contribute formally, will be responsible for their own accommodation and transport costs. The cost for conference attendance will therefore be R750. Some funding may be available for participants who need assistance.
